

Hopeful Experimental Treatment Appeal Letter

Subject: Appeal for Experimental Treatment Coverage - Last Hope for Recovery

Dear Medical Policy Review Board,

I am writing to appeal your denial of coverage for the experimental treatment recommended by my oncologist. While I understand your concerns about covering investigational treatments, I believe my case merits special consideration.

Traditional treatments have failed, and my prognosis without this experimental therapy is grim. This treatment represents my best and possibly only chance for survival. The therapy has shown promising results in clinical trials and has been recommended by multiple specialists.

I am not asking you to cover every experimental treatment, but to recognize that in cases like mine, where conventional medicine has been exhausted, experimental treatments become medically necessary.

My family and I have researched this extensively, and we understand both the risks and potential benefits. We are willing to assume responsibility for any complications while asking only that you cover the treatment costs.

I have lived a full life, but I'm not ready to give up hope. This treatment could give me precious additional time with my loved ones and might contribute to research that helps future patients.

Please consider the human impact of your decision. I am more than a policy number - I am someone's parent, spouse, and friend, fighting for the chance to continue being part of their lives.

With hope and determination,

[Your Name]
