

Career Changer from Different Industry

Dear [Hiring Manager's Name],

I am writing to apply for the Investment Banking Internship at [Bank Name], bringing a unique perspective shaped by my background in engineering and recent transition toward finance. After two years as a data analyst at [Tech Company], I have decided to pursue my long-standing interest in investment banking.

My engineering background has equipped me with exceptional quantitative and problem-solving abilities. At [Tech Company], I built predictive models that improved revenue forecasting accuracy by 23% and presented findings to C-suite executives quarterly. These experiences developed my analytical rigor and communication skills—both essential in investment banking.

To demonstrate my commitment to this career transition, I have completed the CFA Level I exam, finished a financial modeling certification, and enrolled in evening courses in corporate finance and valuation at [Institution]. Additionally, I have been actively networking with professionals at bulge bracket banks to understand the demands and expectations of the role.

I am particularly interested in [Bank Name]'s [specific sector] practice, where my technical background and analytical expertise would be valuable assets. The intersection of technology and finance in your recent deals, such as [specific transaction], aligns perfectly with my skill set and interests.

I recognize that my path is unconventional, but I believe my diverse background, demonstrated work ethic, and genuine passion for finance would enable me to excel in this role. I would welcome the chance to discuss how my unique perspective can contribute to your team.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
