

Humorous approach to magazine internship email

Subject: Future Intern (Who Promises to Keep the Coffee Warm!)

Hi [Editor's Name],

I heard your magazine might be looking for interns, and while I can't promise to write the next Pulitzer-winning piece (yet!), I can promise enthusiasm, dedication, and maybe a few bad puns along the way. Writing and storytelling have always been my passion, and I'd love the chance to learn from your talented team.

Between chasing deadlines, brainstorming quirky article ideas, and staying up too late editing drafts, I know the intern life isn't all glamour but I'm ready for it. I'll gladly handle research, editing, or any other tasks you throw my way (except maybe proofreading my own jokes).

If you're looking for someone eager, hardworking, and slightly funny, I think I might be your intern.

Cheers,

[Your Name]
