

Career Change to Entrepreneurship

Subject: Partnership Opportunity - Bringing Corporate Experience to Startup Innovation

Hi [Name],

I hope this email finds you well. I wanted to reach out because I am at an exciting turning point in my career, and I think there might be an opportunity for us to work together.

After ten years climbing the corporate ladder in product management, I have made the decision to leave the safety of my corporate role and launch my own venture in [industry]. I know it sounds crazy to walk away from a six-figure salary and benefits, but I have been building toward this for two years, and I am ready to take the leap.

Here is what led me here: I kept seeing problems in [industry] that existing solutions were not addressing effectively. I built prototypes on nights and weekends, validated them with potential customers, and realized I had something worth pursuing full-time. I have bootstrapped the initial development, have three pilot customers already committed, and have built a minimal viable product that is generating interest.

What I need now is someone with your expertise in [relevant field] to help take this to the next level. I am not just bringing an idea—I am bringing a decade of product development experience, a validated business model, initial traction, and the determination to make this work.

I know entrepreneurship is not for everyone, and leaving a stable corporate job always involves risk. But I have planned carefully, have twelve months of runway saved, and have surrounded myself with mentors who have successfully made this transition. Most importantly, I wake up excited about what I am building in a way I never did in corporate life.

Would you be open to meeting for coffee to discuss potential collaboration? I would love to share more details about the business and explore whether this might interest you.

Thanks for considering this, and I hope to hear from you soon.

Cheers,

[Your Name]
