

Humorous Deflection - Obvious Frivolous Claim

Subject: Re: Your "Cease and Desist" Letter

Dear [Sender],

I received your letter demanding I stop using the phrase "[common phrase]" because you apparently believe you invented it. I must admit, I got a good laugh out of that one.

I hate to break it to you, but [common phrase] has been used by millions of people since approximately [year]. A quick internet search would have saved you the postage and the embarrassment.

I will absolutely not be ceasing or desisting from using common English language expressions. If you genuinely believe you have a case, by all means, take it to court – I could use the comedy gold that would result from that filing.

In the meantime, I suggest you consult with an actual attorney before sending any more of these letters. This kind of overreach could get you into hot water under laws designed to prevent frivolous legal threats.

Wishing you clarity and a sense of humor,

[Your Name]

Get more templates here:

<https://www.lettersandtemplates.com/letters/response-to-cease-and-desist-letter>