

Formal apology for career decision affecting marriage

Dear [Husband's Name],

I am writing to formally apologize for the decision I made regarding my career without properly consulting you first. I recognize that my actions have affected not only our financial situation but also our plans for the future.

As your spouse and partner, I should have discussed this major decision with you before taking action. Marriage is a partnership, and I failed to honor that partnership when I made this choice independently.

I understand that my decision has created stress and uncertainty in our household, and I take full responsibility for the consequences. I should have been more considerate of how this would impact our shared goals and responsibilities.

Moving forward, I commit to including you in all major decisions that affect our life together. I propose that we schedule regular discussions about our career goals and financial planning to ensure we remain aligned.

I value your input and respect your perspective. Please let me know how we can work together to address the current situation and prevent similar issues in the future.

Respectfully,

[Your Name]

Get more templates here: <https://www.lettersandtemplates.com/letters/sorry-letter-to-husband>